

JCL members surprised Mrs. Elmore, their sponsor, with gifts of appreciation--a jade necklace and a jewelry box--at the Roman Banquet "Picnic in the Forum".

Students weren't the only ones who talk in the hall!

Road to Rome and Spain

"Veni, vidi, vici."

"No comprendo el español, señor."

Foreign language students busily translated Latin or Spanish, learned of customs quite unlike their own, and devoured hunks of Roman and Spanish history.

Spanish lab classes were added to improve the conversational speech pattern of the students.

Frank Kanayet, exchange student from Columbia, discussed the similarities and differences of life in the United States and South America.

Julius Caesar, Cicero, and Ovid were not enrolled in North Putnam Latin classes, but students eagerly read the writings of these great Roman men.

As the Ides of March approached, Latin pupils diligently concerned themselves with the Roman Banquet. Togas were taken out of mothballs, and slaves prepared themselves for their initiation rites.
