

C. Sweet, C. Norman, T. McGaughey were busy cleaning a work bench. Keeping materials in order was important.

Classmates watched James Davis demonstrate a new weld.

Agriculture

Harold Doremire used Vocational Agriculture as a means of teaching the farmers of tomorrow the fundamentals of good farming practices.

Practical, down-to-earth subjects, such as farm welding, animal science, and crop production gave the young farmers an idea of what was to come.

For with a greater knowledge of the problems already conquered and the ones expected, our future farmers were ready for almost any agricultural problems.

Mr. Doremire was the FFA sponsor.

Mr. Hazlett showed a student the drill press.
