Historical societies

The Senior History Club was a group of high school students who were interested in the study of history. Though major emphasis was placed upon Indiana history, all other types were also involved.

The group's activities included several educational field trips, studies of important historical sites, state contests and conventions, and local membership dinners.

The Junior High Historical Society emphasized practical skill with historical knowledge as they built log cabins and other authentic-looking architectural structures for the state convention.

Mrs. Van Vactor displayed a group of Far East artifacts for all to view. Also a Japanese student talked of his home country.

Here the members of the Jr. Historical Society are shown working on their projects.
