

Journalism Club members included M. Scobee, P. Sims, W. Kamplain, R. Proctor, T. Shonkwiler, B.

Cook, D. Ardelean, M. Clodfelter, D. Berry, C. Perkins, C. Stoker, and M. Whitlock.

“Paste up the dummy!”

A tiny room was filled with a long table, a bookcase, a filing cabinet, a desk, a dozen chairs and a group of upper-classmen who loved to laugh and write and laugh. This was called the Journalism Club.

Officers were Chris Stoker, President; Donetta Ardelean, Vice President; Patty Sims, Secretary; Wilma Kamplain, Treasurer; and Debby Disney, News Reporter.

The Club sponsored a magazine in the spring featuring outstanding short stories, poetry, excerpts from term papers, and impressive articles concerning such problems as pollution, Viet Nam, and poverty--all written by students of North Putnam.

Through the efforts of Journalism Club members, a new type of talent was brought into the open.

Yearbook work was done by Diane Evens and Journalism Club member David Berry.

