

The editors of this yearbook were D. Evans, L. Lieske, L. Keeney, D. Wilson, C. Miller, D.

Disney, D. Berry, B. Cook, N. McGaughey, and sponsor Mrs. Stalker.

This was a very good year.

This was the year teachers tried to conduct classes while workmen tried to finish the school. During the fall, we saw holes in the ceiling and ladders in the hallways. In February the pool was filled and ready to use--then (surprise!) the water mysteriously began to disappear. A crack was soon detected and repaired by the beginning of May.

Few will forget our unusual "Civil Defense Drill." With the weather below zero, students huddled together for warmth. The first year for NPHS proved to be full of new experiences.

This yearbook could not have been completed without the aid of Williams Photography Studio, architect Gordon Gibbs, student artists John Peters and Randy Dozier, art teacher Miss Daseler, the Banner-Graphic Sports Department, and last but not least--the hard working, dedicated yearbook staff, led by sponsor Mrs. Linda Stalker.

School was over for the day.

