

As a freshman, new experiences come along, such as having classes with the upperclassmen, who normally wouldn't have anything to do with you while in junior high unless you had gym, and then they probably didn't even know your name, but might have, if they were a helper in a class you were in. Another way they might have found out your name is if you had a class with them once you reached your freshman year, but they probably didn't know it until they heard the class roster read off by the teacher or until they were assigned a seat by you. If none of these were the case they probably just found out by accident. So next time you're in a room with a bunch of strange upperclassmen, remember this: For a Good Time . . . Introduce yourself!

Freshmen seem to want to fit in, be like the upperclassmen. Clothes, shoes and hairstyles seem to become more important to them now than ever before.

They get to experience taking any class they choose. They also find out the secret of getting into the same classes as their friends.

by Brandi Call

Jamie Abdon
Breanna Adams
Kenneth Albright
Jerry Alexander

Chris Alexander
Brad App
Allen Arney
Karrie Ault

Brenda Barker
Craig Bell
Shawn Berry
Laura Blubaum

Treva Bonifacious
Corbin Braeger
Josh Brewer
Shannon Brown

Jason Burks
Russell Bush
Robert Butler
Becky Cantonwine

Troy Childers
John Childress
Brandy Clahan
Christi Cline

Maria Clodfelter
Tina Coleman
Rebecca Collins

