

AND THEY FLEW

By: Stephanie Stevens

Amid tears, hugs, and the smiles of parents, eighty-one seniors of the class of '95 said good-bye to their childhood and took a big step into adulthood as they received their high school diplomas.

Becky Cantonwine and Brian Mason gave the traditional Valedictory and Salutatory addresses to the audience. Mr. Murray Pride, Superintendent of Schools, gave the Commencement speech. He commented that graduation is a beginning as the word commencement suggests, and not an ending.

The moment that everyone was waiting for finally came, and as their names were called, seniors walked across the stage as Mr. Pride presented them with diplomas.

After an impressive candle lighting ceremony, seniors marched out of the gym, and the class of 1995 was only a pleasant memory.

Bobby Butler adjusts his tassel while Laura Blubaum glances at the commencement program.

Good friends Rose Henderson and Lyndsay Klein give each other a hug as they walk down the aisle during commencement.

ns from