

Wendy Taylor puts the finishing touches on stir-fry chicken. She prepared her dish in Mrs. McGaughey's Home Ec. class.

Learning To Live

By: Andy Perkins

Home Economic classes do several projects during the year to help students learn responsibility and to prepare them to some day live on their own. One project this year involved students carrying around dolls for two weeks. The purpose was to let students experience what a tremendous responsibility it is to care for a child.

In P.E. classes, students learned the importance of staying physically fit which is why P.E. is required for graduation. They did so in Mr. Myer's classes by participating in swimming, track and field events, basketball, football, and many other activities. One of the highlights of the year for P.E. students was a trip to the Greencastle bowling alley to try out some of the bowling techniques they had learned in class. Most students enjoyed P.E., except maybe for getting their hair messed up.

Health classes are also required for graduation. In health class, students are given information about reproduction, AIDS and other diseases, proper diet, and CPR. Hopefully, students come away from these classes in better physical condition, and the knowledge to survive in the world as adults.

Mr. Myers spots the photographer on the stage. He was officiating a game of indoor hockey during P.E.