As the lights went down, the entire cast knew that this wasn't just another rehearsal. Now, they had to go out in front of a darkened auditorium and show that they weren't afraid of the dark or performing.

"The play went really smoothly and I wish more people had attended," said Damien South who played the part of a hospital orderly named Ralph.

"As usual the students did a good job with the performance and as Damien said, more students should have come to see it because it's worth the price," commented Mrs. Gjesvold who once again directed the play.

"Everyone got along well despite their differences, It's a very fun experience and I wish more people would of joined," observed Angela English who portrayed Lilac Cooper.
