

Kari Cottongim

It began the day you were born and it comes to me today. The tears of love and happiness that will never go away. When my days would seem so long and I would tire of struggle, you would bounce right up in my arms and give me that reason to smile. You were my strength more than you know and I want you to hear it now, you are my only angel that I will keep safe and near my heart. I want to be your anchor now and never see you struggle, to wrap my arms around you whenever you may need the reason to smile. So, remember whenever you see my tears they are tears of love and happiness, that you my daughter gave me on the day that you were born.

All My Love, Mom

